February 17, 2017

Good news for everyone living in Washington, D.C. You can rest easier tonight.

No, it's not about Trump and all of the recent White House debacles. He's still there and so are all of the debacles.

No, this "you can rest easier tonight" bit of news is about the National Zoo's bobcats: Ollie, the only female bobcat, escaped Thursday (actually, it was a couple of weeks ago, but I just found the story, so I've "adjusted" the facts for my story-it's a trendy D.C. thing to do these days) .

Anyway, she's one of three bobcats at the zoo, and she escaped through a 5" X 5" hole that even Becca wouldn't be able to get through. And they weigh about the same: 25 pounds. This is an animal (Ollie, not Becca) that feeds on small animals - like pet dogs & cats - and low flying birds. Becca thinks about eating the cat, but she knows I'd wonder where Lydia went and she's not sure about all that fur. She can run faster than you can drive around town (the bobcat, not Becca. Her legs are way too short). A zoo official did say that "she's not a threat unless you become a threat to her." Which, actually, pretty much sums up what's happening in D.C.

But zoo officials were confident that she would want to come back-though they didn't specify why. Frankly, if I were her, I'd want to escape D.C., too. I think that's why Trump leaves town on the weekends. But zoo officials were right, and she was soon caught on the zoo property. Which is a little scary, I think. Toddlers and zoos go hand in hand and toddlers are small pet sized. But nothing happened, Ollie is caged, and everything is back to normal at the zoo. Which is more than you can say about the White House.

In other zoo news, Zoo Atlanta and the Roger Williams Park Zoo in Providence, RI, had a super bowl bet: The losing zoo had to name a baby animal after the winning team's quarterback. Clearly the Providence zoo was rooting for Brady and the Atlanta zoo was not.

And clearly, Zoo Atlanta was not planning on naming some cute & cuddly Koala or tiger or bear or even penguin baby after Brady. Nope. They chose a baby Madagascar hissing cockroach, now delightfully called Tom Brady. The baby cockroach is about 6 weeks old and zoo officials don't know if it is male or female, yet. And, yes, they hiss when threatened. And it has 6 legs. And eats dead plant stuff. Actually, that's probably a pretty good description of the real Tom Brady.

I had a friend who had a hissing cockroach. She also had rabbits. And I think she had a tortoise. I got to feed & care for her pets when she went out of town. The rabbits were pretty easy, except when I had to catch them after their routine "run around the apartment for exercise." I could keep up with the tortoise. The cockroach was a little strange. I never saw it; I just kept feeding it romaine lettuce. It didn't get to roam around the apartment, thank heaven.

In more animal news. And no we're not back to Trump, scientists are about 2 years away from bringing back the woolly mammoth. You know, that huge creature that stars in Ice Age and talks like Ray Romano? Scientists have been doing a "Jurassic Park" number on genes from long dead mammals combining them with genes from elephants. Sounds a little like what John Hammond was doing in Jurassic Park: finding old dino DNA inside old insects trapped in tree sap and combining it with DNA from frogs.

The gene editing technique is called CRISPR, which stands for bring giants back to life. Actually it means: Clustered regularly interspaced short palindromic repeats. I think it should stand for:

create really insane scary prehistoric monsters. But that's just me. I've watched the movies. I know what happens to the lawyer.

We're going to need Melissa McCarthy to help promote this genesplicing/cloning project. She's the actor in the commercials for an eco car that tries to save the whales, forests, rhinos and other endangered things. Well, the plan for this woolly mammoth is to release it in the tundras of Siberia. The mammoths punch holes in the tundra to eat, thus allowing cold air to seep into the ground, keeping the tundra from thawing. That keeps the ice from melting and the greenhouse gases from escaping into the atmosphere. I'm not making this up.

But if successful, this does mean we will have to stay on good terms with Russia. "Cause last I looked, that's where Siberia is.

If we have to put up with the wind, might as well have a little fun.

Contest Rules: 1) Design a "What Wind?" 12" finished block. Blocks can be pieced, appliqued, embroidered-your choice. It must finish at 12" (which means, unfinished it will be 12 1/2"). Block must be provided.

2) Provide a written pattern.

3) Deadline: March 15.

4) Blocks will be displayed in the shop and customers can vote for their favorite.

Now here's the fun part (if designing a block wasn't fun enough :))

Everyone who enters will be able to get the patterns from all the other entrants. Each entrant will also select a charity of her choice, to be written on a slip of paper & put into a bowl. On March 18, National Quilt Day, several things will happen: A Viewer's Choice Award of $25 gift certificate will be awarded, patterns of all the blocks will be given to entrants, and we'll draw for the favorite charity.

My job, after the contest, will be to put together all blocks into a quilt. This quilt will then be given to the favorite charity as a raffle/fund raiser.

Make sense? All clear? It's Friday the 13th and all sorts of odd things have been happening, so I'm sure I left out some important detail. If you have questions, just ask.
