QUILT SHOP

January 27, 2017

I learned a new word this week: Photo bombed. I learned this word after I read a headline that just didn't make sense: Young Aussie Surfer Photo Bombed by Shark That Shared Wave.

I couldn't figure out why a shark would be taking pictures of a surfer. And in the picture of the surfer, you couldn't see a shark holding a camera. In fact, you could barely see the shark. What happened was this shark was surfing the same wave as a 10-year-old boy. Dad was on shore taking pictures and saw the shark, through the lens, beneath the waves. He got his kid to shore, then showed him the pictures. The kid did see a shape in the water while he was surfing, but thought it was seaweed, although he did feel a bump when he went "over the top," presumably that was "over the top of the shark." The kid said he was glad he didn't know that a great white shark (a little one, if great whites come in little sizes) was next to him on the wave.

So that's the story, but it still didn't explain the "photo bombed" part of the headline. So I looked it up. I do this for you, you know. I feel it's my job to keep you up to speed on the latest and greatest cultural additives. So "photo bombed" means a person or thing, in this case the shark, appearing unexpectedly in a picture. So for all of you who wagged finger Vs above someone's head in a picture, just to be funny, that's a photo bomb. It's both a verb and a noun, so I think you can use it anyway you like.

Here's another-I just had to look some up. On fleek. This expression generally means smooth, nice, sweet or the quality of being perfect or on point (like something coming to a point, not an argument that's on point, but who really knows....). Anyway, while the word "fleek" appears to have been used as early as 2003 (I know, that's decades ago), its most recent use came from a teenager would had just gotten her eyebrows done. In 2014, she posted a 6 second, or so, video on a social media site called Vine, in which she said, in part (because the other part I can't repeat here) "Finna get crunk. Eyebrows on fleek.

Translation: I'm ready to party (finna get crunk). And my eyebrows are pretty and come to a sharp point (eyebrows on fleek). I know, you just gotta dive into this stuff and start using it. Your grandkids will think you're funny.

Well, things went viral after that. Celebrities started using it and arguing over who coined the phrase. And there is some debate whether that 2014 teen was the first to use it. You know how the internet is: We have alternative truths all over the place, so it's hard to track down just what is and what isn't. But I suspect that for word coinage, we don't have to worry too much about those facts, especially since the phrase has gone viral, at least in some circles, and it's probably passe to use now, and that's a real word the tweens may not know.

Anyway, even Taco Bell started using it in connection with its Twitter posts advertising tacos, although it took the CEO a couple of tries to get it right. The CEO was giving a presentation to some analysts and investors associated with the company about how the company was learning a new millennial word a week in an effort to stay connected with the young crowd. So he told them about the phrase "on cleet." His media advisers told him afterward, that the phrase was "on fleek." To my knowledge, "on cleet" has not gone viral, unless it has something to do with football and shoes. I just wouldn't know about that.

Now this CEO is 41. And he clearly wasn't on fleek the day he made his presentation. And if a 41 year old can't be on fleek, I don't think there's hope for the rest of us except as a diversion for the grand kids.

Here are a few other strange new words:

Amrite (I'm all right), faved (to favor a tweet), unbothered (pretty obvious, meaning no bothered), boolin (chilling), baeless (single), bruuh (bro).

So, this week amrite and unbothered. I'm working on an on freek quilt, and my house in boolin because of the weather. Translation: It's been a good week. I'm working on a quilt that is set on point. And my house is cold because it's cold outside.

Somehow, I think I'm a bit like the 41-year-old CEO of Taco Bell: I'm not quite using these new words right. But most of these words are used on social media sites like Twitter, where you have to cram a lot of things into just 140 characters. My dad used to call that shorthand, and he always wondered why I never learned it. Kids call it tweeting, I guess.

I think I may practice this new language on the dogs. They don't listen much to me anyway.

What Wind? Contest

If we have to put up with the wind, might as well have a little fun.

Contest Rules: 1) Design a "What Wind?" 12" finished block. Blocks can be pieced, appliqued, embroidered--your choice. It must finish at 12" (which means, unfinished it will be 12 1/2"). Block must be provided.

2) Provide a written pattern.

3) Deadline: March 15.

4) Blocks will be displayed in the shop and customers can vote for their favorite.

Now here's the fun part (if designing a block wasn't fun enough :))

Everyone who enters will be able to get the patterns from all the other entrants. Each entrant will also select a charity of her choice, to be written on a slip of paper & put into a bowl. On March 18, National Quilt Day, several things will happen: A Viewer's Choice Award of $25 gift certificate will be awarded, patterns of all the blocks will be given to entrants, and we'll draw for the favorite charity.

My job, after the contest, will be to put together all blocks into a quilt. This quilt will then be given to the favorite charity as a raffle/fund raiser.

Make sense? All clear? It's Friday the 13th and all sorts of odd things have been happening, so I'm sure I left out some important detail. If you have questions, just ask.
